- All teams shall bat their roster in each game. A maximum of 10 players shall bat each inning. The 11th batter will lead off the next inning. The manager must notify the plate umpire of the 10th batter and the umpire shall announce this to the defensive team.
- An inning is complete if three outs occur or the ball is returned to home plate after the tenth and last batter hits (the catcher must touch home plate). Each inning will have an 8 run limit. Once 8 runs score the sides will switch even if only 8 or 9 batters have been to the plate.
- The entire team will play the field (6 players on infield); all remaining players will play behind the infield/outfield line.
- Infielders must remain behind the infield grass line (imaginary) and the must remain in front of the outfield grass until the ball is hit. Infielders must not go into the outfield to get a ball. They can go into the outfield to be a cutoff but cannot be the first to the ball and make a play.
- The ball is dead when the umpire calls time. Umpire shall call time at the end of each play. Play ends when the lead runner is no longer attempting to advance to the next base or when the defensive player throws the ball into the 10 foot circle.
